DOG PICTURES BY ROSSEAU SHOWN

Actual Hunting Experiences Enable Painter to Make

Artist Has Excellent Feeling for Line and Composition -Some Examples.

The dog pictures by Percival Rosses now on exhibition in the John Lavy Gal- Ginsburg & Levy Show Antiques in leries appeal to a wide public, for all the world loves a dog, but as most of the canines which have posed for Mr. are the latest to be added to the list of uptown art emporiums, which continue to grow in spite of the war. Probably more art establishments of importance of income and the stable of the st has had schooling, but it is the adventure of the open field and actual hunting serve admirably in Paris at present, for instance. They are almost entirely under ground, and in fact descend three stories below the sidewalk.

The gallery on the street level is but an entrance hall, and the elevator, inthey are always on the job. It is clear stead of taking one up, takes one down dogs in his pictures are never posing; they are always on the job. It is clear the artist knows their language and stray dog manœuvre, and he paints his setters and beagles with as much intensity as the dogs themselves put into the hunt.

Without this first hand and intimate knowledge, dog pictures and sporting pictures in general, are not worth much, sportsmen themselves cannot be fooled and the old time prints and paintings that have kept their popularity have always had the quality of being truthful reports by a faithful witness of the event depicted.

The gallery on the street level is but an entrance hall, and the elevator, in an entrance hall, and the elevator, in the elevator, in sisted of 300,000 ships that an entrance hall, and the elevator, in the elevator, in sisted of 300,000 ships that on the construction is made possible by the location, as the building is one of those built over the deep excavations for the Grand Central Terminal. The rooms, once reached, conform to the usual conventions for galleries, and show off very well the antiques that are displayed in them.

It happens, in the present case, that the artist in addition to being a sports-man is an able painter. He knows dog anatomy as well as dog nature, and he has an excellent feeling for line and composition. His pictures are always well arranged and complete. Then, too, he does not think it necessary, as some painters of sporting pictures do, to painters of sporting pictures do, to represent invariably his dogs front face, Every so often, since the beginning of the war, members of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas clubs get together and give a dance which has its inspiration in patriotic motives. Last night's affair was no exception; every cent raised as a result of it will be devoted to war relief work in the three States represented, and the soldiers and sallors were guests. The ballroom was won by Luenna von Eits, 1921; archery, won by Dorothy Burne, 1920, discus hurling, won by Helen Jones, 1921. The chariot race was won by 1921, and the torch race, in which the runners carry lighted torches in relays, was won by the sophomores, as the freshmen were delayed by a recalcitrant torch that refused to stay lighted.
